

Copenhagen Street Lab

Copenhagen Street Lab

Copenhagen Street Lab is a smart city test area in the heart of the city designed to test digital solutions to urban challenges in a real life setting.

Copenhagen Street Lab will use network technology and sensors to reduce air pollution and noise, optimize waste collection, and provide intelligent parking and Wi-Fi solutions. Establishing open standards will further strengthen innovation around smart city technology.

Making the smart city happen

We want to make the smart city happen. And we invite citizens, decision-makers, companies and researchers to join the open innovation process in Street Lab and help us harvest the potentials of digital technologies in urban development:

- How can it help us achieve our goals of a livable and green city?
- How should we invest in digital infrastructure and technologies?
- What kinds of innovations are needed, and what is the market potential for these solutions?
- How can we improve co-creation of solutions to urban challenges?

Please contact us for more details on how you or your company can be involved in building our future city.
